House of Lords Reform Draft Bill – Some key points

- A reformed House of Lords of 300 members, which would be 80 percent elected.

- 240 members would be elected using a single transferable vote system…. Elections would be staggered so that a third of seats would be contested at each election.

- 60 members would be appointed. The Government would establish an Appointments Commission.

- Each member, whether elected or appointed, would serve a single non-renewable term of three election cycles; around 15 years.
