A huge wave of organisational change is about to sweep employment and service delivery in public services with a drive for commercially run, profit making social enterprise driven by social aims. With profits reinvested into social, community or environmental objectives, local government will seek more innovative solutions to today's social and economic problems. Both public service organisations and potential enterprise leaders are required to look at the feasibility of mutuals, co-operatives and social enterprise models.

This conference and TV programme has been put together with the leading organisations working in the field and is the first in a series which will provide delegates the opportunity to hear from sector leaders, academics and government who will explore best practice in leadership, finance, service models, governance and legal proprieties.

This is a 'must attend' event for councils considering commissioning or venturing into social enterprise either through mutuals, cooperatives, spin-outs or employee owned business models. This conference will help you benchmark your work getting started and processes established.

The presentations will contribute to an expert resource bank for use across public services.

Purpose of the Conference:

Specifically, attending this conference will enable you to benchmark:

Social enterprise, mutuals and co-operative enterprise models cover a wide range of possibilities and permutations which, the Cabinet Office have indicated, can include joint ventures with private companies and the use of private capital and investment

Strategic policy managers need to test the feasibility of venturing into these new service models through assessing the opportunities and risks while considering what 'works' in practice. This is a complex judgment requiring new types of procurement, market making and commissioning skills, especially when spinning a service out to a preferred bidder consisting of existing staff.

This conference will help you benchmark your work getting started.

More specifically you will:

- Hear from speakers involved in developing these recent government processes
- Be introduced to sources of information and advice from experts in the field
- Assess your work against best practice around the country
- Explore how other organisations are finding ways to engage staff in a time of difficult change
- Assess the implications for your existing services
- Discuss how to start social enterprise and mutual modes with existing staff
- Hear the experiences of senior managers who have travelled this road
- Look to combining with new external resources to reform services
- Evaluate offering services to preferred bidders with staff provided the opportunity to create mutuals and social enterprises
- Discuss how public bodies are looking to use their assets to work with staff
