Localism promoting collaboration:

Redefining LSPs from the ground up

Thursday 14th July, Westminster Studios, London SW1P

Speakers include:

Dr Ellis Friedman

Joint Director of Public Health, London Borough Hillingdon and NHS Hillingdon; Chair of the Health and Wellbeing Board Subdivision, Hillingdon's Local Strategic Partnership

Steve Robinson

Chief Executive, Cheshire West and Chester Council

Henry Peterson OBE

Localism and Devolution Independent Consultant

Kehri Ellis

Co-Director, Newcastle Partnership

Jessica May

Joint Chair, Partnership Futures

Supported by:

Although Local Strategic Partnerships (LSPs) continue to assist the public and voluntary sector in streamlining services and managing budgets, the past year has seen a change of emphasis in the delivery of local partnerships. In the absence of Local Area Agreements and prescription from central Government, the sector is provided with a better opportunity than ever to define what partnership working ought to look like.

With the imperative on local services for local people expressed within the Localism Bill, Health and Social Care Bill and Social Responsibility Bill, it is clear that the notion of streamlined public services is very much still alive. This is, in part, emphasised by the introduction of Local Enterprise Partnerships and Community Budgets.

This conference is a must-attend for anyone working locally to strategically deliver and implement effective partnership working. Attendees will be provided the opportunity to explore new legislation, best practice in partnership delivery and shared services.
