In light of the Justice Green Paper, this successful annual conference will this year provide an opportunity to discuss how to turn the Coalition Government's policy for reducing re-offending into practice. The agenda will also address how innovative partnerships can achieve value for money and make the Big Society work for the sector in times of budget cuts and reduced funding.

Bringing together representatives from police, probation, local authorities and voluntary organisations, with expert speakers in the field, this event will look at specific outcomes from the Justice Green Paper: including the rehabilitation revolution, the role of the voluntary and private sector, and payment by results.
