In the US 20% of all public university alumni give to their university. In the UK it is closer to 2%.

What opportunities do the much publicised reductions in government spending present to institutions to build a culture of voluntary giving?

2011 also marks the end of the HEFCE's matched funding scheme.

This conference will bring together vice-chancellors, directors of development, external affairs, major gifts, finance, and other senior decision makers to examine how to sustain the gains that have been made and the critical future role of major donors, philanthropy and alumni funding.
